Vision, we need vision. To see beyond the pain and strife, beyond this present, evil life; unto a day of peace, they say and happiness--a world at rest.

No more broken families, no divorce to shatter dreams. No more sad and empty lives, filled with despair. No more hungry children cry, no more reason they should die. No more cold and empty nights to wait alone. He'll bring them home, again-- until then...

Vision, we need vision. To see beyond the pain and strife, beyond this present, evil life; unto a day of peace, they say and happiness--a world at rest.

No more crime filled cities, then, no more locks to keep them in. No more fear to walk the streets alone at night. No more disease to shorten life, no more deaf or lame or blind. Rejoice, for they will all be healed, again, until then...
